Doing Life Together

What does "Doing Life Together" look like? It means giving space in the church for people to learn and talk about the realities of living life. It means creating an environment where the church meet's God's people where they are at, addressing life issues and providing resources to deal with those issues.

Doing Life Together gives language to people's experiences by asking social workers, health care providers, law-enforcement officials, educators, community service providers: What's happening in our communities? Responding to that question then by offering a series of programs designed to assist people in finding language for what they are experiencing.

On Wednesday Evenings and Sunday mornings beginning Sunday February 19 through Wednesday March 28, Living Waters is hosting a series of programs, designed to meet the issues within the communities we serve.
